Title: National Evaluation of the Arrest Policies Program Under the Violence Against Women Act (VAWA), 1996-2000

ICPSR Study Number: 3795

Funding Agency: United States Department of Justice. National Institute of Justice

Grant Number: 98-WE-VX-0012

Summary: This study was undertaken to evaluate the impact of the Arrest Policies Program, funded by the Violence Against Women Office (VAWO), on criminal justice system changes and offender accountability, and victim safety and well-being. Through convenience sampling, six project sites were chosen to participate in the study. Part 1, Case Tracking Data, contains quantitative data collected from criminal justice agencies on arrests, prosecution filings, criminal case disposition, convictions, and sentences imposed for intimate partner violence cases involving a male offender and female offender. Data for Part 2, Victim Interview Data, were collected from in-depth personal interviews with domestic violence victims/survivors (1) to learn more about victim experiences with and perceptions of the criminal justice response, and (2) to obtain victim perceptions about how the arrest and/or prosecution of their batterers affected their safety and well-being. The survey instrument covered a wide range of topics including severity and history of domestic violence, social support networks, perceptions of police response, satisfaction with the criminal justice process and the sentence, experiences in court, and satisfaction with prosecutors, victim services provider advocates, and probation officers.

Universe: Part 1: Intimate partner violence cases involving a male offender and female victim from any of the six pre-selected study sites. Part 2: Female victims/survivors of an intimate partner violence incident (from any of six pre-selected study sites) where the victims/survivors experienced the arrest and prosecution of their batterers.

Data Source: For Part 1, administrative records data were collected from police incident and arrest reports, prosecutors' offices, and criminal justice agency case files. For Part 2, data were collected from personal interviews conducted with victims/survivors.

Sample: Through convenience sampling, six project sites were chosen by the ILJ to participate in the study. Researchers believed that the six sites would allow for inclusion of different types of projects and project environments. They also determined that six was the maximum number of sites that could be examined in depth within the evaluation budget. The six sites were chosen from 20 sites which were already participating in a process evaluation of the Arrest Policies Program. Criteria had been established earlier in the project to assess each of the 20 projects/sites in terms of data availability and access to victims/survivors. Other factors were also considered: type of project leadership (e.g., police, prosecutor), focus of the grant-funded efforts, jurisdiction size, geographic representation, and access to samples of domestic violence victims who were members of racial and ethnic minorities. The final selection of sites was made by the ILJ research staff in consultation with members of the national advisory board, the federal technical assistance providers, the National Institute of Justice, and the Violence Against Women Office. For Part 1, a random selection of 100 misdemeanor cases from a specified time period in 1996 (pre-grant), and 100 cases from the same time period in 1999 (post-grant) was chosen. The cases were to be identified from police arrest reports and were restricted to intimate partner violence cases involving a male offender and female victim. Because not all six sites had specific provisions in the law for designating domestic violence as felonies distinct from other felonies, only misdemeanors were included in the sample. The selection process also required that each offender be included only once. For Part 2, the research design called for 15 women from each of the six sites to be chosen to complete a "long version" of the interview. These women experienced the arrest and prosecution of their batterers.

Dates of Collection:	1998-2000
Response Rates:	Part 1: Not applicable. Part 2: Not available.
Presence of Common Scales:	Several Likert-type scales were used in Part 2.
Unit of Observation:	Part 1: court cases. Part 2: individuals.
Geographic Unit:	none
Data Collection Notes:	The user guide, codebook, and data collection instrument are provided by ICPSR as Portable Document Format (PDF) files. The PDF file format was developed by Adobe Systems Incorporated and can be accessed using PDF reader software, such as the Adobe Acrobat Reader. Information on how to obtain a copy of the Acrobat Reader is provided on the ICPSR Web site.
Restrictions:	The data are restricted from general dissemination. Users interested in obtaining these data must complete a Data Transfer Agreement Form and specify the reasons for the request. A copy of the Data Transfer Agreement Form can be requested by calling 800-999-0960 or 734-647-5000. The Data Transfer Agreement Form is also available as a Portable Document Format (PDF) file from the NACJD Web site at http://www.icpsr.umich.edu/NACJD/Private/private.pdf . Completed forms should be returned to: Director, National Archive of Criminal Justice Data, Inter-university Consortium for Political and Social Research, Institute for Social Research, P.O. Box 1248, University of Michigan, Ann Arbor, MI 48106-1248, or by fax: 734-647-8200.
Extent of Collection:	2 data files + machine-readable documentation (PDF) + SAS data definition statements + SPSS data definition statements

Extent of Processing: Missing data codes were standardized by ICPSR. ICPSR checked for undocumented codes, produced a codebook, generated SAS and SPSS data definition statements, converted the hardcopy documentation to a PDF file, and reformatted the data and documentation.

Data Format: Logical Record Length with SAS and SPSS data definition statements

ICPSR CODEBOOK NOTES

1. ICPSR created a unique sequential record identifier named ID_ICPSR for Part 1.
2. In Part 1, some continuous variables have high and low values that may fall out of a valid range. These values are not labeled because they may be valid. However, users of the data should be aware of the possibility that these values may not be valid.
3. ICPSR recoded system missing values to 9-series and labeled them "Missing" in Parts 1 and 2.
4. For Part 2, a unique case identifier may be obtained by running a cross-tabulation of the site number variable (SITE) and the participant identification variable (ID).
5. ICPSR was unable to verify value labels for two variables in Part 2. For categorical variables, undocumented values are labeled "Undoc code."
6. The data in Part 2 is comprised of responses to only the closed-ended questions corresponding to the long interview survey instrument, which is located in the appendix of the PDF version of the codebook.

Arrest Policies Project

Long Interview

This interview will take about 1 hour to complete. The information you give me today will be used to tell us how the police and court system can better help women. Since you are the expert, any information you give us will be extremely helpful. Everything you tell me will be kept confidential from everyone outside of the research team and will not affect any services you receive from any law enforcement agency or from the court system. If any of the questions make you uncomfortable or don't apply to you, just let me know.

Throughout this interview I will be asking questions about the person who was arrested for physically harming you. The reason I'll be asking these questions is so that we can better understand your circumstances as well as the effect this person's violence and the court case have had on your well-being. Because these are personal questions, it may seem less awkward for me to refer to this person by name. What is this person's name?

(GET FIRST AND LAST NAME & SPELLING)

INTERVIEWER: This form is reserved for those in which the case was prosecuted. The final disposition will vary (i.e., acquittal, conviction, deferred sentence, dismissal after some court action attempted). The key here is that the prosecutor did make an attempt to prosecute the case. If the case was rejected, or dismissed before any court action, or is simply held in abeyance with little chance of prosecution (i.e., adjournment, contemplation of dismissal), use the short interview.
