Announcing a New ICPSR Scholarship
For individuals at Under-Resourced Institutions

About the Scholarship
For the 2014 Summer Program in Quantitative Methods, ICPSR has established a new scholarship directed toward students, faculty, and recent alumni at ICPSR member institutions that have been deemed "Under-Resourced Institutions" (URIs). By offering these scholarships, the Summer Program seeks to increase opportunities to individuals at colleges and universities where training in social science research methodologies and technologies may be limited. See below for a list of ICPSR member institutions designated as Under-Resourced Institutions.

Persons eligible for a URI scholarship must be enrolled students, faculty members, or recent alumni (less than 3 years) with a demonstrated interest in empirically oriented social science research. There are no requirements about the specific substantive focus of an applicant’s research. The URI Scholarship provides a fee waiver to one or both of the Summer Program’s four-week sessions.

Application Materials
Applicants must first register for the ICPSR Summer Program through the Summer Program’s online Portal by selecting classes in one or both of the four-week sessions. (Applicants may later change their course selections, should they wish to do so.) The scholarship committee may use an applicant’s preferred courses as another piece of information in the selection process.

After registering through the Summer Program portal, applicants must electronically submit the following materials:

- A current curriculum vitae or resume
- A cover letter from the applicant, indicating how participation in the ICPSR Summer Program will contribute toward his/her professional development
- For Students: two letters of recommendation from faculty or research professionals. For Faculty: a letter of support from the applicant’s graduate faculty advisor or department chair.

Applicants must email these supporting materials to sumprog@icpsr.umich.edu

The deadline to submit scholarship applications is May 1, 2014. Up to three scholarships will be awarded.
Questions? Contact the ICPSR Summer Program at sumprog@icpsr.umich.edu or (734) 763-7400.
